ABOUT THE BOOK

The present book of Śrī Harṣeśvara-māhātmyam or The Glory of Lord Harṣeśvara, a Famous Śiva-Dhāma of Kashmir, is based on careful collation of three old Śāradā manuscripts of the Ādi-Purāṇa origin. Almost all the renowned "Tīrthas" (Holy places of pilgrimage) of the valley of Kashmir have Māhātmyas, lucid narration in poetries regarding presiding deities of the "Tīrtha", attached with them. The present Māhātmya as has its text based on Ādi-Purāṇa gives us the most authentic account of an eminent Śiva-Dhāma of ancient Kashmir called Harṣeśvara, also the place of pilgrimage. Apart from depicting the divinity of a particular "Tīrtha", this Māhātmya throws ample light on the topographical and scenic surrounding of the "Tīrtha" as also on the socio-cultural activities of the inhabitants of the region. Śrī Harṣeśvaramāhātmyam is one of the principal Māhātmyas of Kashmir. The Presiding Deity of this Māhātmya is none else but Lord Śiva Himself, also called Harṣeśvara—the destroyer of the demon Tāraka.

The present book of Harṣeśvara-Māhātmya which comprises 155 beautiful Sanskrit verses has been duly rendered into simple English with descriptive notes. The Introduction of the book presents a comprehensive account of the ancient Kashmir. The book will be useful both for the devotees of Śiva and the readers in general.

PREFACE

The present edition of the Harṣeśvara-Māhātmyam or The Glory of Lord Harṣeśvara, an eminent Śiva-Dhāma of Kashmir, is based on careful collation of three old Śāradā manuscripts of the Ādi-Purāṇa origin. Almost all the renowned "Tīrthas" (holy places of pilgrimage) of the valley of Kashmir have Māhātmyas, lucid narration in poetries regarding presiding deities of the Tīrtha, attached with them. Such Māhātmyas as have their texts based on Ādi-Purāṇa give us the most authentic account of the places of pilgrimage. Apart from depicting the divinity of a particular 'Tīrtha', the Māhātmyas throw ample light on other aspects as well.

The present book of Harṣeśvara-Māhātmyam is one of the principal Māhātmyas of Kashmir. The presiding deity of this Māhātmya is none else but Lord Śiva Himself, also called Harṣeśvara, the cheerful God Śiva, the destroyer of demon Tārak. It is composed of 155 beautiful verses which depict an eminent Śiva-Dhāma of Kashmir, known as Harṣeśvara. It has great attraction for the devout Hindus of Kashmir.

The worship of Śiva-Liṅgam has all along been a religious obligation of every member of that ancient Kashmirian society from the time immemorial. The annual pilgrimages to various Śiva-Dhāmas, situated in far too distant Himālayan interiors in order to perform the worship of the 'Svayambhūḥ' lingams—the self-created lingam formations, were regularly organized with religious zest. As for the Harṣeśvara-Liṅgam (inside the cave), it is a magnificent Lingam of whitish-blue hue, with a visible mark of being attired with Gajajina— the hide of an elephant, is gracefully seated on a small elevated daislike stone structure in the northern corner of sanctum-sanctorum of the cave.

At a short distance above the Harṣeśvara-cave there is another cave known as Cakreśvara cave. A living proof of the Harṣeśvara's antiquity is further confirmed by its close association with the Takśaka-Nāga, an ancient Kashmirian Tirtha of the days of the Mahābhārata. It occurs in the poetic works of Kalhaṇa and Bilhaṇa.

In order to get oneself sufficiently acquainted with the socio-cultural set up of the ancient Kashmiran society, as also, the ancient topographical scenario of the region, the study of this vast Māhātmya literature of ancient Kashmir is a must. These Māhātmyas, despite their Prima-facie religious and legendary character, provide us with ample information concomitant to the social behaviour and cultural ethos of that ancient Kashmirian society, often recorded by the authors of these Māhātmyas quite unwittingly.

In the present book an attempt has been made to succinctly give an account of the history of the Harṣeśvara-Māhātmyam in the Introduction. I think it is a comprehensive one and it will amply acquaint the readers with the importance of this Māhātmya. The textual portion which is in Sanskrit has been duly rendered into simple English with descriptive notes explaining the difficult terms. The Sanskrit text has also been transliterated into English and has been separately appended at the end of the translation making the book useful even for those who don't know Devanāgarī script. I hope that the book will be useful both for the devotees of Śiva and the general readers alike.

THE SOURCE-MATERIAL

The present edition of the Harṣeśvara-Māhātmyam is based on careful collation of three Śāradā manuscripts of the Ādi-Purāṇa origin. With the help of this genuine source material the original Saṁskṛt text of the entire Māhātmya has been given a perfect and reliable shape and made palatable to the elite reader. Apart from this no effort has been spared in making it absolutely free from other types of textual flaws like scribal errors, lacunae, defective positions of the text and so on to the possible extent.

In order to establish the genuineness or otherwise of any ancient Māhātmya text, belonging to any sacred Tīrtha of Kashmir, the native Saṁskṛt scholars adhere to an age-old practice. The Māhātmya-text which has the Ādi-Purāṇa as its source is considered a genuine one, while the same text, if based on any Purāṇa other than Ādi-Purāṇa, is not given much credence. It is due to the fact that the Māhātmya texts based on the Ādi-Purāṇa are always found comprehensive, accurate and genuine. In the present case, however, luckily have been able to lay hand upon genuine manuscript material.

IMPORTANCE OF THE ANCIENT MĀHĀTMYAS

In order to get oneself sufficiently acquainted with the socio-cultural set up of the ancient Kashmirian society, as also, the ancient topographical scenario of the region, the study of this vast Māhātmya literature of ancient Kashmir is a must. These Māhātmyas, despite their Prima-facie religious and legendary character, provide us with ample information concomitant to the social behaviour and cultural ethos of that ancient Kashmirian society, often recorded by the authors of these Māhātmyas quite unwittingly.

There are two categories of Māhātmyas of the various ancient sacred Tīrthas of Kashmir available to us at present :

- I This category includes those Māhātmyas which have undisputed Paurāṇic origin, Ādi-Purāṇa in particular, and which were subsequently assembled in the form of a Saṁhitā by no less a person than Bhṛṅgīśa a well-known Saṁskṛt scholar in yore, on the basis of their unquestionable authenticity and excellent literary merit. Much credence has always been attached to these Māhātmyas by Saṁskṛt Pandits of Kashmir on account of their anteriority and scriptural precision. In most cases these Māhātmyas surpass in excellence even well-known Paurāṇic compositions of Kashmir like Nīla-Mata and others.

II This category comprises such Māhātmyas as were, according to Dr. Stein, composed by various Tīrtha-priests of ancient Kashmir at various posterior dates. Their main purpose was to propagate the creed and other virtues of their respective Tīrthas amongst regular pilgrims and to oblige them with a supply of accurate guide-books in lieu of sumptuous amounts paid by them. Though being the compositions of posterior dates secondary position was assigned to such Māhātmyas in comparison to Māhātmyas classified in category I, yet the itinerary descriptions recorded in these provide ample and valuable information to scholars interested in ancient geographic scenario of ancient Kashmir.

Apart from this, one more advantageous feature in these Māhātmya-texts is that their authors have extensively recorded, locally current names of ancient places of public interest, instead of their old Samskr̥tized names as we find in the Raj-Taraṅgiṇī of Kalhaṇa-Pandita, Haraṇṇaritaṇṇintā-manih of Jayadratha, Śrīkaṇṇṇaṇṇaritam of Maṇkha and so on. This helps to a large extent in identification of a number of ancient sacred places, far-flung villages, springs, routs and so on.

THE BHR̥ṆGĪŚA-SAM̐HITĀ

In order to understand fully the importance of this vast multitude of Māhātmyas of ancient Tīrthas of Kashmir a thorough knowledge of the Bhr̥ṇgīśasam̐hitā is an essential pre-requisite. This remarkable work once constituted a prominent compilation of the Māhātmyas of almost all Tīrthas of Kashmir by an eminent scholar of those days Bhṛṅgīśa or Bhṛṅgī by name. This name Bhṛṅgīśa itself is somewhat intriguing insofar as a triad of eminent personalities, belonging to different periods bore the same nomenclature as Bhṛṅgīśa. This triad included one Gaṇa 'the immediate attendant on Śiva, one sage of great repute and one teacher of extraordinary learning. In such a situation whom the virtual compilorship of this unique literary work be assigned to is a difficult task. In the case of first Bhṛṅgīśa the indulgence in such worldly affairs seems to be totally out of question, as the trifle allurements of the kind do not matter in the case of a realized soul who has attained the Gaṇa-hood of the Supreme-Śiva. Regarding the remaining two Bhṛṅgīśas, scholars are of the opinion that the second Bhṛṅgīśa—the reputed sage might have taken first initiative in this direction sometime in 5th cent. A.D. and centuries after him the third Bhṛṅgīśa—the holy teacher picking up the thread again gave final shape to it prior to 12th cent. A.D.

Unfortunately this important work possessing a vast treasure of topographical information of the ancient Kashmir is not extant at present in its original complete form. Only its small fragments are scattered at various places both in and outside Kashmir. Even the printed edition of it, (publication of Śrī Raṇavir Kendriya Saṁskṛt Vidyāpeetha Jammu) is a fragmentary one.

The surprising resemblance found in the triad of names viz, 1. 'Bhṛṅgīśa' the name of the author of the saṁhitā, 2. 'Bhṛṅga' the name of the entire Bhṛṅg-valley from well known tourist resort Acchabal to Kukarnāga another famous tourist resort, situated in the south-eastern fringe of Kashmir valley, and 3. 'Bhṛṅgī' the name of the stream flowing through 'Bhṛṅga' valley and emptying the waters of the Kukarnāga and other minor springs, tempts one to conclude that the author of the Bhr̥ṅgīśa-Saṁhitā might have been surely a native of the same 'Bhṛ̥ṅga' valley. Presumably he, being a scholar of par-excellence, might have been respected and loved by the contemporary masses to the extent that the entire area was named as the 'Bhṛ̥ṅga-valley' by them in order to express special regard for him.

THE KĀŚMĪRĀ

The enchanting vale of 'Kāśmīrā' - virtually the divine mother Pārvatī, having transformed Herself in the form of this region, as ancient Paurāṇic lore puts it, has all along been enjoying an eminent position of being a region of divine gaiety. Eversince its emergence from the vast legendary lake 'The Satī Saras' millennia ago, Mother-Pārvatī -the Supreme-Śakti-is believed to be ever vibrant in every particle of this region. Its scenic beauty and hospitable environment has constantly been quite inspiring for the people who came here from far and wide in their aesthetic quest. The cup-shaped valley like a charming damsel lulled to sweet slumber by the cool and tranquilizing breeze in the beautiful cradle of surrounding Himalayan peaks, appears as if deeply absorbed in melodious notes of lovely cascades and gurgling brooks. The beautiful meadows decorated with velvety turf and filled with fragrance of flowers and dense forests of pine trees dallying with variegated flora and founa, further add to its unparalleled elegance.

The past grandeur of Kashmir, featuring extraordinary advancement of its natives in the area of spirituality and ultimate self recognition has no parallel. Apart from this their contributions in other branches of learning like poetry, drama, rhetoric, aesthetics, satire, lexicography, grammar, architecture and above all history and Trika philosophy also are unique.

Kalhaṇa-Pandita the well known poet-Historian of Kashmir (12th cent. A.D.) too, has been all-praise for uncommon gifts granted to his birth-place by the nature. As estimated by him in his Raj-Taraṅgiṇī, the right knowledge, lofty mansions, saffron, icy-cold water and grapes were the things which though being scarce in heaven were a matter of common enjoyment in his native land:

विद्या वेश्मानि तुङ्गानि कुङ्कुमं सहिमं पयः।

द्राक्षेति यत्र सामान्यमस्ति त्रिदिवदुर्लभम्॥

(K.R.T. 1, 42)

In a fit of extreme love for his birth-land he has drawn a firm conclusion that firstly the jewel-producing earth (the entire Bhūloka) is exclusively laudable in all three worlds, next to it therein the northern quarter which belongs to Kubera—the god of wealth and the regent of that quarter. Thirdly the mountain, father of Gaurī, (The Himalaya) and finally the region situated in the lap of that mountain (valley of Kashmir) deserves to be extolled.

त्रैलोक्यां रत्नसूः श्लाघ्या तस्यां धनपतेर्हरित्।

तत्र गौरीगुरुः शैलो यत्तस्मिन्नपि मण्डलम्॥

(K.R.T. 1, 43)

THE SOCIO-CULTURAL SET-UP OF THE ANCIENT KĀŚMĪRIAN SOCIETY

The socio-cultural set up of the ancient Kashmirian society was a harmonious blend of diverse faiths, cults and philosophic outlooks. That represented another graceful phenomenon exclusively based on golden principles of mutual love, respect and proper understanding, each and every member of that society always adhered to the principle of "live and let live". They had a single aim of evolving in themselves a perfect human-being physically stout and spiritually alert – the Uttamaḥ-Puruṣaḥ, no matter whatever the creed, class and means adopted to achieve that end. They persistently tried to understand each others point of view without any promotion and prejudication. They readily accepted that whatever was acceptable for the benefit of the society as a whole, and fearlessly discarded that whatever appeared to them otherwise. Realization of the self was the sole objective of their meditation, and to help others in their distress was their worship.

THE LIṄGA WORSHIP IN ANCIENT KASHMIR

The worship of the Śiva-Liṅgaṃ has all along been a religious obligation of every member of that ancient Kashmirian society from the time immemorial. According to Kalhaṇa's writings and the information supplied by various Paurāṇic sources, the perpetual worship of Śiva-liṅgaṃ in Kashmir constituted a phenomenon related to distant past. Kalhaṇa-Pandita, in his Raja-Taraṅgiṇī makes a mention of a very old Śiva-Liṅgaṃ, known as the 'VATĒŚVARA' which was still existing in a perfectly shining condition in his own times (12th cent. A.D.). The Liṅgaṃ was essentially worshipped by an ancient king of Kashmir Rāvaṇa by name, who ruled over this region from 2017 to 2047 Laukika era corresponding to one millennium B.C. The Liṅgaṃ was of the efficacy of foretelling the future events through the light emitting from dots and lines of, presumably, an occult çakra engraved on that :

बिन्दुरेखाच्छविर्यस्य दृष्ट्वा भाव्यार्थशंसिनी ।
स रावणस्य पूजार्थं लिङ्गं भाति वटेश्वरः ॥

(K.R.T. 1, 194)

The king used to worship the Liṅgaṃ in a Maṭha and vowed the entire region of Kashmir to that in an extreme fit of devotion.

चतुःशालामठस्यान्तः कृतायादायि भूभुजा ।
वटेश्वराय निखिलं तेन कश्मीरमण्डलम् ॥

(K.R.T. 1, 195)

In another event the illustrious historian tells about another king 'SĀNDHIMAT' by name, who reigned over the region from 3041 to 3088 Laukika era approximately middle of 1st cent. B.C.—

"The king in no circumstance deviated from the pledge of consecrating one thousand Śiva-Liṅgaṃs—
The Sahasra-Liṅgaṃs daily :

शिवलिङ्गसहस्रस्य प्रतिष्ठाकर्मणि प्रभोः ।
प्रतिज्ञा प्रत्यहं तस्य नाभूद्विघटिता क्वचित् ॥

(K.R.T. 2, 128)

According to further information available in this regard not only the Liṅgaṃs of various shapes and sizes made of clay, stone or metal only were worshipped but in many cases the Liṅgaṃs of flowers and the ice etc. were also prepared, consecrated and meditated upon:

"He (Sāndhimat) used to spend the months of spring on the forest elevations enjoying the festivities of worshipping the Liṅgaṃs of flowers after having dips in the mountain revulets : —

स्नातस्य निर्झराम्बोभिः पुष्पलिङ्गार्चनोत्सवैः।

राज्ञस्तस्य वनोर्वीषु मासः पुष्पाकरो ययौ॥

(K.R.T. 2, 137)

Apart from this the annual pilgrimages to various Śiva-Dhāms, situated in far too distant Himalayan interiors in order to perform the worship of the 'SVAYAMBHUH' Liṅgams – the self-created Liṅgam formations, were regularly organized with a religious zest.

Among these Svayambhuh-Liṅgam formations the magnificent 'MAHĀDEVA-Liṅgam' situated on the summit of lofty, mount Mahādeva at Harvan-Village, the 'DHYĀNEŚVARA' Liṅgam situated in a long narrow cave at Bhandipora a famous town in northern part of the Kāmraj Pargana of the valley, the 'SUREŚVARA' Liṅgam in a mountain cave forming the background of present Niśat village, are a few worthmentioning instances of the Svayambhuh Liṅgams.

Regarding the meditative aspect of the Liṅgam worship, the ancient scriptures are equally emphatic on the point that it is not a lump of clay, a stone, a piece of metal or a precious gem moulded in a particular shape or size to be considered as the real divinity and meditated upon. The highest reality is far above the physical, phenomenal or even the psychological level. The reality cannot be found anywhere outside, but can be experienced within one's own inmost conscious self with invigorated effort of deep introspection:

मृच्छैलधातुरत्नादिभवं लिङ्गं न पूजयेत्।

यजेदाध्यात्मिकं लिङ्गं यत्र लीनं चराचरम्॥

THE HARṢEŚVARA-LINGAM (INSIDE THE CAVE)

The magnificent Harṣeśvara-Liṅgaṃ of whitish-blue hue, with a visible mark of being attired with Gajajina—the hide of an elephant, is gracefully seated on a small elevated daislike stone structure in the northern corner of sanctum-sanctorum of the cave. A cuplike depression in front of the Liṅgaṃ is said to be the Kapāla—the begging bowl of the All-satiated glorious recluse. Behind Him the five-faced Liṅgaṃ of the “SVACCHANDA - BHAIRAVA” of whitish hue, can be seen in a deep niche of the wall.

Amongst other venerable divinities, the Supreme-Mother Pārvatī, God Nārāyaṇa and God Brahmā, in a bid to give vent to their utmost devotion towards the Supreme-Lord, have taken their seats on the floor of sanctum-sanctorum in front of the Harṣeśvara. In the low visibility of the cave the sungod and the moongod appear like two glowing objects fixed to the eastern wall. In the right of the Harṣeśvara Śrī-Mahā-Gaṇeśa seated on a higher elevation, close to the inner end of entrance, seems to be extra-cautiously engaged in keeping a constant vigil on the entry-point in order to check the illegitimate entry of evil-spirits into the cave. The entire ceiling of the cave embellished with interwoven serpentine formations of white-stone, with their ever-dripping hoods hanging downwards, present a look of an exquisite coiffeur stretched in all sides. This is believed to be thousand hooded Śeṣa-Nāga ever-engaged in offering the holy bathing to Parama-Śiva-Liṅgaṃ along with the Liṅgaṃs of other divinities.

The conch-like winding passage, leading from the outer mouth of the cave to inner sanctum-sanctorum, appears like a narrow tunnel through which only one person at a time can crawl in.

The sanctum-sanctorum appears as if divided into two separate apartments. While the outer apartment serves as a celestial drawing room common to all divinities, the inner one is considered serving as a special store-room of the Mother-Pārvatī. It is bedecked with pitcher-like stones, big and small, sequentially piled one upon the other along the semi-circular wall. According to local belief, still prevalent among the Hindus of Kunamuh-village, these stones are considered to be the containers ever filled with cherishable boons of prosperity being bestowed upon the righteous devotees irrespective of the considerations of caste, creed and colour.

THE ÇAKREŚVARA CAVE

At a short distance above the Harṣeśvara cave there is another cave known as the Çakreśvara-cave. The entry into it through a narrow winding passage is a matter of arduous adventure for an inexperienced pilgrim. To ensure, therefore, the safe entry and exit the guidance of a local priest or a guide is much needed.

THE TAKṢAKA-NĀGA (A Living Proof of the Harṣeśvara's Antiquity)

The close association with Takṣaka-Nāga, an ancient Kashmirian Tīrtha of extraordinary merit, in no ambiguous terms affirms the antiquity of the glorious Harṣeśvara-Tīrtha, at least, dating back to the days of the Mahā-Bhārata.

The Takṣaka-Nāga, also mentioned by the renowned Saṃskṛt poet Bilhaṇa of Kashmir (12th cent. A.D.) in his well-known poetic composition the 'Vikramāṅka-devaçaritaṃ', is a magnificent spring of limpid water, still existing in its original form in Zyavan village.

Bilhaṇa has made a mention of this village too as 'the-Jayavana' together with Takṣaka-Nāga in the following śloka :—

तस्मादस्ति प्रवरपुरतः सार्धगव्यूतिमांत्री
भूमिं त्यक्त्वा जयवनमिति स्थानमुत्तुङ्गचैत्यम् ।
कुण्डं यस्मिन्नमलसलिलं तक्षकस्याहिभर्तुः
धर्मध्वंसोद्यतकलिशिरच्छेदचक्रित्वमेति ॥

(V.C. Bilhaṇa 18, 70)

"At a distance of one Gavyūti (Ten and a half kms approx.) from that 'PRAVARPURA' (present Śrīnagar) there is a place adorned with lofty, caityas (sanctuaries) called as 'JAYAVANAM', wherein there is a spring of limpid water, dedicated to Takṣaka the serpent-lord, which serves as a wardisc in respect of cutting the head of the Kaliyuga which is bent upon destroying the Dharma."

Among other innumerable Tīrthas of ancient Kashmir this Takṣaka-Nāga alone enjoys the special distinction of being mentioned in the Tīrtha-Sangraha of the great epic Mahā-Bhārataṃ which removes all doubts regarding its antiquity.

We find a description of the spring in Kalhaṇa-Pandita's Rāja-Taraṅgiṇi as well during the period of king Nara who, as estimated by Dr. Stein, ruled over Kashmir during 2083-2123 Laukika era. According to Kalhaṇa's description throngs of people from all walks of life equally enjoyed their participation in the great festival of annual Takṣaka-Nāga pilgrimage on the 12th day of dark fortnight in the month of Jyeṣṭha. The special singing and dancing performances presented by chosen artists of the day, had been main attractions of that spectacular festive occasion:—

ज्यैष्ठेऽत्र कृष्णद्वादपूयां यात्रायै तक्षकस्य . . . ।

+ + + + + + +

क्रमात् प्रववृते सोऽथ नटचारणसङ्कुलः ।

प्रेक्षिलोकसमाकीर्णस्तत्र यात्रामहोत्सवः ॥

(K.R.T. 1, 220-223)

The Nīlamata-Purāṇa also makes a specific mention of this Nāga (spring) along with its religious merits in śloka 904.

The Takṣaka-Nāga is the same serpent-lord who, according to Paurāṇic tradition, survived the onslaught of being consigned to the fire of the serpent sacrifice, once performed by the king Janamejaya, consequent upon effective intervention of the great seer Āṣṭika.

Apart from this Dr. M.A. Stein — the editor-translator of Kalhaṇa's Rāja-Taraṅgiṇi has also made some valuable observations in this regard in his foot note on śloka 1, 220 of Kalhaṇa-Rāja-Taraṅgiṇi.

Regarding the village Jaya-vana it is presently known as Zyavan-Village and is situated at a distance of about 10 K.ms. (one and a half Gavyūti as stated by poet Bilhaṇa) to the north-east of the Srinagar city, en-route to Harṣeśvara.

The spring (Takṣaka-Nāga) is presently known as the 'TAKYAK-NĀG' in the local parlance and is enclosed to a mosque.

THE IDENTITY OF TĀRAKA

Tāraka the most degraded villainous character of the Māhātmya is just a namesake of Tāraka with whom we come into contact in the Kumārasāmbhava of the well reputed Indian Saṁskṛt poet Kālidāsa. We learn about two separate formidable demonleaders of distant antiquity through two separate Purāṇas, namely, Garuḍa-Purāṇa and Matsya-Purāṇa. The Garuḍa-Purāṇa presents one Tārakāsura as a main adversary of Indra—the son of Manu and grandson of Dakṣa-Prajāpatih, without giving any detail of his pedigree. Instead it makes a mention of a prophecy to the effect that the annihilation of the demon would be brought about through the God Nārāyaṇa in his self-assumed disguise of a ‘नपुंसक’ i.e. a hermaphrodite form, - neither a complete male nor a complete female — (नपुंसकः-न पुमान् न स्त्री):

मनोस्तु दक्षपुत्रस्य द्वादशस्यात्मजान् शृणु ।

+ + + + + + +

..... तत्रेन्द्रस्तारको नाम तद्रिपुः ।

हरिर्नपुंसको भूत्वा घातयिष्यति शंकरः॥

(Garuḍa. Purāṇa, Chapter 87)

Regarding the second Tāraka we find a detailed description in the Matsya-Purāṇa. According to that demon Tāraka was the son of a demon-couple ‘VAJRĀṆGA’ and ‘VAJRĀṆGĪ’ by name. He propitiated God-Brahmā by practising severe penance and in lieu of that got a long desired boon of not being killed by anyone except a seven days old child. The obstinate demon overwhelmed by devilish mentality started misusing his godgiven supernormal strength. In a fit of acute perverseness he persistantly persecuted the wives of celestiol beings time and again in order to get his sensual thirst satiated. Ultimately God-Kumāra, - the offspring of the Lord-Śiva killed him on the seventh day of his birth :—

वज्राङ्गो नाम दैत्योऽभूत्तस्य पुत्रस्तु तारकः ।

सुरानुद्वासयामास पुरेभ्यः स महाबलः॥

+ + + + + + + + +

तस्मात्तु स समुद्भूतो गुहो दिनकरप्रभः।

स सप्तदिवसो बालो निजघ्ने तारकासुरम्॥

(Matsya Purāṇa, 5-11-145)

The comparative study of both Paurāṇic descriptions clearly indicates that the modus-operandi employed by the God-Nārāyaṇa in reducing Tārakāsura to ashes in the Māhātmya is more akin to the description found in the Garuda-Purāṇa. One feels, therefore, tempted to establish the identity of Tāraka of the Māhātmya as one with Tāraka of the Garuda-Purāṇa.

One thing more is worth-mentioning here. The local tradition, as found prevalent among the Hindus of village Khonamuh, even at present, knows the demon by the name 'BHASHMĀSURA' instead of TĀRAKĀSURA, but so far as the documentary evidence in the form of old Śāradā MSS of the Māhātmya is concerned, this appears to be a sheer misnomer crept in at any later stage.

THE HARṢEŚWARA-SEVĀ-DAL

It may not be out of place to mention here that in middle eighties the Hindus of village Knonamuh had formed a type of Management Committee with "Harṣeśwara Sevā Dal" as its nomenclature, comprising enthusiastic youngmen of the vicinity endowed with missionary zeal and sense of dedication. The aims and objects of the aforementioned Sevā-Dal, among a number of other things, were to enhance the glory of this Tīrtha by providing all the present-day amenities to the pilgrims. In this connection the Seva-Dal had brought out a small book-let detailing therein various measures required to be taken for the purpose. These included acquisition of land for constructing a small temple, a Dharam-śālā with all the amenities of a meeting hall, a lungar, toilet facilities, a "Kaina Baserā" type temporary lodging etc. etc. In furtherance of this noble task, the Dal did succeed in acquiring some land in the centre of the village itself and constructed a small temple till 1989 when the political situation in the valley took a turn for the worst because of the terrorism unleashed by Pakistan and the work had to be suspended. What followed is now a history.

Besides the publication of an edition of the Harṣeśvara-Māhātmyam on the basis of an authentic and old Śāradā manuscript was also on the agenda of the Sevā-Dal and in that context they had approached me through Shri Chaman-Lāl Rāzdan and Autar-Kṛṣṇ Pandita both residents of the village Khonamuh. Despite the paucity of source material an essential pre-requisite for completing such a project, I had promised them a meaningful initiative in this regard and the present endeavour is just a fulfilment of that promise.

My sincere thanks are due to following friends and well-wishers for their kind co-operation, extended to me, in one way or the other during the completion period of the assignment :

- (Ā) All the members of the Harṣeśvara-Sevā-Dal whose constant inspiration proved to be the main impelling force behind completion of the project in totally changed atmosphere of the valley.
- (B) Sh. K.L. Swaroop, a close friend of mine who provided a number of valuable suggestions in respect of making the edition more purposeful.

- (C) Smt. Roopa-Devi, the then incharge manuscript library of Research and Publication department, J. and K. State who took personal interest in making the required source-material available to me in those risky winter days of 1990 when the militants in the entire valley had started their nefarious design against the humanity.
- (D) My thanks are also due to Shri J.L. Gupta, Penman Publishers who enthusiastically took up this work and brought it out with excellent get-up.

Let me conclude now with the following benedictory śloka :

पद्मसद्गकरमर्दलालितं पद्मनाभनयनाब्जभूषितम्।

SALUTATIONS TO VENERABLE GURU—

The very embodiment of Goddess Saraswatī (the Goddess of Learning). Humble obeisance to Sh. GAṆEŚA.

Prostrations to that self-existent Absolute-consciousness—the Transcendental-light illuminating the universe, and being beyond the reach of speech and mind and always All-Awake.

योगीश्वरं प्रणम्येदं पप्रच्छुः परमादृतः ।

Once, during the course of usual pilgrimage to sacred

Tīrthas, a host of seers headed by Śaunaka and others, assembled at the Sati-Saras.¹ The place is situated in extremely delightful Himalayan range which is exquisitely adorned with various Tīrthas and highly sanctified with sacred pollen belonging to the lotus-feet of the Goddess Śāradā.² There they (seers) having come into contact with the son of Satyavatī,³ a yogi of distinction, paid due homage to him and made the following enquiry from him with utmost respect.

1. According to an ancient tradition, still alive, the present valley of Kashmir was actually, a gigantic lake in the hoary past. This legendary lake, on account of being considered to be the sacred pleasure-lake of the Mother Goddess Sati, was named as the Satī-Saras which denotes the Pleasure-lake of Goddess Satī. Though with the passage of time, the lake was desiccated and converted into a beautiful region, presently known as the valley of Kashmir, by the ancient sage Kaśyapa, yet this name continued to be in common vogue for centuries over without any change. Thus the entire Kashmir Valley was known as the Sati-Saras in the days of yore.
2. The Mother Goddess Śāradā is considered as the main presiding deity of Kashmir region from time immemorial. For this reason the entire region was known as the Śārada-Deśa also. Bilhaṇa, a famous Saṁskṛt poet of Kashmir (12th cent. A.D.) has mentioned this very name of the region in his well-known poetic composition Vikramāṅka-Deva-Çaritam thus : —

सहोदराः कुङ्कुमकेसराणां भवन्ति नूनं कविताविलासाः।

न शारदादेशमपास्य नूनं दृष्टो मयान्यत्र तयोः प्ररोहः॥

Śāradā—The famous Śāradā Tīrtha, still existent in the north-west part of Jammu and Kashmir state, is under illegal occupation of Pakistan at present.

3. Satyavatī was the name of great sage Vyāsa's mother.

श्री शौनकादय ऋषयः ऊचुः

ये न त्रैकालिकं ज्ञानं प्रत्यक्षमिव दृश्यते ।

The respectable seers—Śaunaka and others stated thus:

O blessed and inspired sage! you are indeed the most eminent preceptor of all yogis and thus have a clairvoyance of the past, present and future as direct perception as it were.

The entire credit of carrying out the great task of re-adjustment of the Vedas with their respective Śākhās (schools) goes to you alone, as the ancient Vedic order, with the passage of time, had been very badly affected. You are the celebrated author of fascinating epic known as the Bhārata, which on account of being abundantly full of legends and ethical doctrines, has been termed as the fifth Veda.

O the most excellent sage! you are exceptionally acquainted with the essence of knowledge contained in the Śrutīs (Vedas). Be pleased to narrate quickly the greatness of any prominent Tīrtha (existing in the region) to the assembled group of seers which would certainly purify their sense of hearing and prove to be the bestower of the reward of worldly enjoyments and the liberation as well.

Just now we pray you to let us know that particular place from amongst the whole lot of sacred places which enjoys the holiness and reverence from all the seers and a glance of which guarantees attainment of liberation.

इति पृष्टस्तदा योगी व्यासः सत्यवतीसुतः ।

प्रोवाच परया भक्त्या नमस्कृत्य स्वयं भुवे । १२ ।

Having been entreated thus the great Yogi Vyāsa, the son of Satyavatī, after paying due obeisance to the self-existent divine, replied with an extreme fervour of devotion.

हर्षेश्वरेति विख्यातं त्रिषु लोकेषु संज्ञया ।

Vyāsa

O respected seers, listen ye all. As already revealed by

Brahmā ere-long, the sacred abode of Śiva, renowned as Harṣeśvara all over the three worlds over, is certainly a Tīrtha of divine celebrity (amongst the existing lot),

यं दृष्ट्वा लभते लोकं शाम्भवं भववर्जितः ॥14॥

नरकार्णवयोग्योऽपि यं दृष्ट्वा स्वर्गमश्नुते ।

सुकृती कृतिनां वर्यो राजते परमे पदे ॥15॥

Beholding that (Tīrtha) a votary attains absolute freedom from repeated births and deaths and ultimately reaches Śiva-Loka. Even a wicked person condemned to be thrown into the Ocean of hell, if undertakes a pilgrimage to that holy Tīrtha, is undoubtedly transformed into a pious soul and chosen one among the righteous men. Thus having enjoyed the comforts of the heaven for long finally shines in the highest position.

ये लोका दानशीलानां ये लोका यज्ञयाजिनाम् ।

तपोनिष्ठानां ये लोकास्ते हर्षेश्वरदर्शिनाम् ॥16॥

Such divine regions as are attained by those who give alms to needy, offer oblations to sacrificial fires and practise austerities abidingly, are equally attainable by those persons too, who pay regular visits to the holy Harṣeśvara.

सर्वलोकेश्वरो यत्र साक्षाद्भर्ग उमापतिः ।

कर्ता धर्ता च संहर्ता लोकानां शिवभूः स्वयम् ॥17॥

Indeed this is the sacred place where Bharga (Parama-Śiva) representing the eternal light of Consciousness, the consort of Umā, the sole Lord of all beings, the creator, the preserver and absorber of the whole cosmic process and the essential fountain-head of divine bliss for all, is perpetually stationed himself in his conspicuous divine form.

That is the sacred abode wherein the Supreme īśvara constituting the real spirit of everything becomes manifest on three stages of existence¹ and simultaneously appears in two facets viz, the Sakala (the transience)² and the Niṣkala (the transcendence)³ corresponding His own saguṇa (with

1. (A) According to system of Kashmir Saivism, the Supreme Śivahood is simultaneously manifest on three stages which are as under:
 - I The absolute stage of perfect unity transcending all types of temporal, spacial and corporeal limitations. This stage is technically called as the Śakti stage.
 - II The stage of diversity in unity comprising subjects and objects belonging to Pure-Path the Śuddhādhvan above the sphere of the Māyā. This is technically called as the stage of the Vidyā.
 - III The stage of absolute diversity comprising multitudes of subjects and objects of Impure-Path the Aśuddhādhvan, under the sphere of the Māyā. This is technically called as the stage of the Māyā.
2. (B) In the Śaiva parlance the word Sakala indicates the divine experience delimited by and related to a subtle material form having all senses and organs. The Sakala experient of Śaivas corresponds to the Saguṇa form of God-Nārāyaṇa of the Vaiṣṇava cult. According to their belief God-Nārāyaṇa having assumed a mortal form and hence subjected to the limitations of three constituent qualities of the nature viz. the Sattva, the Rajas and the Tamas, is called as the Saguṇa.
3. The technical word 'Niṣkala' in the verse 18 above denotes the transcendental experiencer Parama-Śiva, who is beyond the pale of all limitations and in whose case all sorts of repletions and depletions carry no weight at all. This aspect of divine corresponds to the Nirguṇa form of the God-Nārāyaṇa in the Vaiṣṇavite belief.

1. The Śakti, in other words known as the Cit-Śakti, Svātantrya Śakti and so on, is the fundamental I-Consciousness-Power—'Aham' or in other words the eternal Self-awareness-Power or the divinity eternally inherent in the Absolute Being—the Parama-Śiva. This essential-power being the spontaneous creative throb ever-awake in the Divine, enables him to manifest his own self in the form of prodigious universe, preserve it and then reabsorb it in the self.

The followers of the Śakti cult take this creative faculty of the absolute as his indivisible female aspect. They worship it in the form of the Mother-Goddess Parā-Śakti—the divine Mother of all.

2. Yojana denotes an ancient Indian measure of distance roughly equal to twelve kilometres.

O ascetics affluent in austerities ! his daughter Pārvati, having won over the hand of Śiva by means of severe penance, occupied half portion of his divine form as a mark of abiding devotional love for him.

Seers :

O the son of Satyavatī and a seer of distinction, our compelling curiosity urges us to know the real purpose for which God-Nārāyaṇa, notwithstanding His being the sustainer of the world, consigned the demon Taraka to the flames? Apart from this we are also eager to know the modus-operandi employed by Him in the operation.

ईश्वरस्याज्ञया तत्र यद् दग्धो दैत्यपुङ्गवः ।
तदशेषेण कथितुं प्रसादं कुरु नो मुने ।।

O reputed seer! oblige us by giving out all details regarding that eventful incident which led to the demon of strong nerves being consigned to fire (by Nārāyaṇa) in compliance with the divine commandment.

Vyāsa

In the days of yore, there was a demon, Tāraka¹ by name who conquered all the three worlds by his fierce prowess. All the same having no regard for moral discretion, he resorted to generating constant agony in the hearts of charming wives of his adversaries (the celestial gods)

स क्रूरबुद्धिर्मघवत्पदार्थी

That ruthless enemy of the celestial beings, ardently longing for the seizure of the spacious seat of Indra (the king of heaven), once chanced to enter a forest in pursuit of hunting. There he happened to see the eminent and compassionate sage Nārada treading the far end of the forest track.

The demonking who was commander-in-chief of his demon army as well, offered cordial prostrations to that accomplished yogī there on the roadside and asked him with extreme devotion, "O noble seer! who is the god amongst divine beings who can be propitiated quickly by practising penance?"

1. The second half of the verse connotes that the wicked and ruthless demon mercilessly oppressed the celestial gods causing great distress and constant misery to their better halves.

That yogī of extra-ordinary repute replied to him thus:

O the ruler of demon-race! listen to me attentively. Methinks, none but the Glorious-Lord Śiva identified as the supreme-sovereign of the entire universe, embellished with the necklace of Śeṣa serpent, the spouse of Pārvatī and bearing the crescent on His forehead, is the only deity certain to be pleased quickly by practising penance.

इच्छास्ति चेदैत्यविभो विभूता-

O the ruler of demons! in case you eagerly seek after the fortune engage yourself in meditating upon the Īśa mounted on the divine bull (Nandikeśvara).

The revered yogī having stated thus disappeared instantaneously by invoking his inherent self-concealing power (Māyā). The demon too, on the other hand, cancelling all his royal obligations, left for sacred Tīrtha of Kedāra in order to practise penance over there.

As soon as the demon, whose prowess had boosted up considerably because of penance, saw the glorious Śiva standing in front of him, he at once fell prostrate with due respect, for reasons of inherent Sattva (the quality of goodness), present in him. But (within no time being overwhelmed by demonish propensity) he prayed for a boon enabling him to reduce the entire populace of heavenly gods to ashes.

"Let it be so" was the spontaneous and positive response from all-compassionate Śiva accompanied by Pārvatī (His consort). Thus, He, on account of being a benign-god who witnesses and disposes of all actions (vicious or virtuous) on the spur of the moment, is the divine controller of the Kāla i.e. the time-factor and the god of death, is the divine master of the Kalās i.e. all digits of existence and is the sole proprietor of divine digit of moon, readily accepted his prayer.

The demon with enhanced quantum of prowess for reasons of boon from Śiva, after having seen him accompanied by the daughter of the mount Himālaya (Pārvatī) lost control over his senses. Thus overcome by the villainous nature he started running after Him with the intention of abducting Her (Pārvatī)

‘OM-NAMAH-ŚIVĀYA’

Prostrations unto you Śiva

The moon and the sun form your glittering eyes;¹ you are the Supreme-Spirit (Hamsaḥ)—the pure conscious self which am ‘I’—Aham, and the bestower of eternal repose

1. In the Śaiva parlance the ‘moon’ and the ‘sun’ symbolically denote ‘Apāna and Prāṇa, the ‘action’ and knowledge’, the waking state and dreaming state etc. respectively.

(Śaṃbhū), by repelling dense darkness (Ajñāna) with the divine light of Right-Knowledge¹ (Śiva-Vidyā) imparted by your own glorious-Self

Salutations to you Śiva

You alone are perfectly acquainted with real nature of five divine powers and the multitude of thirty six elements- (Tattvas) which constitute the entire universality. You are the destroyer of all demons and the remover of all defilements.

Prostrations unto you Śiva

You are, indeed, the wishyielding tree (Kalpa-Vṛkṣa) with respect to the fulfilment of desires of innumerable devotees. You have reduced all the three regions, occupied by force by the demon Tripura who was bent upon devouring up the entire world, to ashes.

Salutations to you Śiva

Your own female aspect (Śakti), appearing forth atop the mount Kailāśa, is rejoicing in the supreme delight of the most artistic divine dance called the 'lāśya'. You alone enjoy the glory of vanquishing the array of demons by doing away with their commander-in-chief, known as Andhaka.

55

Prostrations unto you Śiva

You alone possess the divine power of withdrawing the multitude of physical existences on the occasion of final cosmic dissolution (the Kalpānta marking the end of one complete cycle of creation). You alone are the upholder of the divine play (of manifestation, sustenance and withdrawal) of all the three worlds.

1. The compound-word -'निज-दृग्भासा' in the original Saṃskrit text refers to the light of sacred knowledge found in the Śaivite scriptures traditionally believed to have been revealed by Śiva Himself Pārvatī.

Salutations to you Śiva

You shine eternally and simultaneously in your bifaceted appearance viz (1) the ultimate consciousness filled with uncommon intuitive knowledge i.e. the highest Śiva consciousness and, (2) the empirical-self possessed of imperfect intellect i.e. the Paśu-consciousness. Thus you carry on the unfoldment of two facets of your divinity concurrently viz (1) the 'Niṣkala' i.e. the transcendental shorn of all blemishes and, (2) the 'Kalaṅka' ie the transient besmeared with stigmas of the Māyā.

My humble respects to you the bearer of the sacred Gaṅgā.

Praṇāmas to you Śiva

You alone have the discriminatory comprehension of the matters related to the highest spirit as defined in various schools like the Vedānta the Siddhānta etc. The Prāṇa ie. the subtle universal life-vitality is your intrinsic form. You alone are all-blissful and filled with firm knowledge.

Salutations to you Śiva

By taking recourse to the logical propositions and other relevant scriptural provisions you verily reflect upon your own divine-self (in the form of pure I-consciousness). Indeed, you get manifested through the tenets of the Mīmāṃsā which approbate the sanctity of ritualistic performances.

59

Prostrations unto you Śiva

As sole imperishable entity you are the real bestower of the 'Kaivalya'-(complete freedom of the sentient 'Puruṣa' from the insentient 'Prakṛti'). You alone have revealed the knowledge of the Sāṅkhya Philosophy which explains the relationship between the sentient 'Puruṣa' and the insentient 'Prakṛti'.

Prostrations unto you Śiva

To the followers of the Śaiva-Path you reveal the right knowledge of identifying the entire phenomenal universe as one with the Absolute Śiva. Being the sole ultimate-consciousness you cut asunder the snares of attachment with the mass of material objects.

61

Salutations to you Śiva

As envisaged in the Vedantic thought you are the Supreme-Brahman-purity par-excellence. Verily, you act as the Kāla (the time factor) and have elaborately postulated the knowledge and wisdom of the Ārvāks.¹

62

As enunciated by the holy scriptures, having manifested your own divine self in the forms of the earth, the water, the air, the fire, the moon, the sun, the Ātman and the ether, you exist eternally. Though easily accessible to all nobody knows your real nature.

किमर्थमधुनैवाहं स्मृतो भगवता त्वया।

विधेयं किं तवेशान शाधि मां किं करोम्यहम् । 63 ।।

What is the purpose which prompted you remember me at this moment? O great Lord! what is the immediate service to be rendered by me to you? Be pleased to enjoin upon me what am I supposed to do for you?

1. Ārvāks are the followers of the Indian materialistic thought.

व्यासः

हरिणा योगिपूज्येन मायिना हनपायिना । ६४ ॥

उवाच वचनं शम्भुः सुधौघाप्लाविताक्षरम् ।

Vyāsa—O asectics affluent in austerities! the Supreme-Ruler of celestial beings and all-blissful Śiva was praised thus by the imperishable God Nārāyaṇa who was adored by yogis and enjoyed control over Māyā. (Consequent upon this) lord Śiva spoke the (following) words, soaked in the flood of ambrosia, as it were.

शिवः

शृणु योगीश दैत्यारे मच्छक्तिस्त्वं जनार्दन । ६५ ॥

मद्भक्तो मन्मतिर्नित्यं मत्परायण मद्बचः ।

Śiva

O Master of yogis, foe of the demons and tormentor of the wicked! listen to me. Essentially being none other than my own Śakti you are abidingly devoted to me and have your sole attention ever focussed in me alone.

त्वया हताश्च ते वीरा दैत्येन्द्रा मधुसूदन । ६६ ॥

मामेव हन्तु कामोऽसौ तारकाख्यो महासुरः । ६७ ॥

तद्गच्छ मायया विष्णो दैत्यं भस्मीकुरु क्षणात् ।

O Madhusūdana! you have already done away with a host of demon-leaders of the strongest nerve (in the past). O the Master of the Māyā! just see, presently this unscrupulous demon, Tāraka by name, whose mind has grown over-abundantly arrogant with the acquisition of a boon from me, has taken the course of striking me down (in return). For this reason, O Viṣṇu, I beseech you; proceed forthwith, press into action your specific delusive-power-Māyā and, reduce him to ashes in no time.

इत्यादिष्टो भगवता हरिः शीघ्रं गुहामुखात् । ७८ ॥

निर्गत्य दैत्यराजं तं शैलपादे ददर्श ह ।

The God-Nārāyaṇa, having thus been commanded by the glorious Śiva, came out of the cavern at once and found the demonking standing on the foothill of the mountain.

तत्रैव भगवान् विष्णुः स्त्रीरूपं निजमायया । ७९ ॥

चकारोन्निद्रपद्माभं मुखं सुखकरं नृणाम् ।

The Lord-Viṣṇu, bringing into action His Māyā (the supernal delusive stratagem) on that very spot assumed a feminine form embellished with a face as charming as a full bloomed lotus, providing extra delight to the on-lookers.

The God-Nārāyaṇa, (a divinity of the 'Ekavira' status and an expert in bringing into play the divine Māyā, having assumed a beautiful form and moving along in graceful gait befitting to a charming damsel (including the Goddess Pārvati or the Goddess Lakṣmī) showed His bodily appearance to that mighty demon from the top of the mountain.

1. Any Sādhaka, who with the intense grace of Parama-śiva gets entry into the Turiya state of consciousness and consequent upon that becomes the master of Indriya-Śaktis (senses) is called the Vīra-Pramāta in the Śaiva-scriptures.

Lord-Śiva on account of being the sole Supreme-Vīra without any second rival is mentioned as the Eka-vīra in the present context.

दैत्यः स विस्मित इव क्षणविस्मितेति-

The charming limbs of the graceful lady made her exquisitely beautiful to look at and, as soon as, the demon caught her glimpse, the cupid (Ananga = the god of love) instantaneously generated excruciating pain in his heart with a volley of arrows pointed at him. He was wonder-stricken, at it were, and totally forgot all his obligations within no time, and fell a victim of the exclusive mental bewilderment.

The flowery weapons of the cupid caused an unbearable burning sensation in all limbs (of his body) as he mistook the lady for the daughter of the snowclad mountain (Himālaya). The feverish hot breaths turned his lips dark-blue and with great anguish he could utter a few words in a seemingly smiling tone.

दैत्येश्वरोऽहमवनौ दिवि भूमिरन्ध्रे

वीर्यावधूतसुरवर्यमहाप्रभावः।

त्वां संविलोक्य कतमोऽस्त्यपरोऽभिलाषः

I am the paramount ruler of demon race having exclusively wiped out the tremendous majesty of the chief celestial god Indra from the earth, the upper region and the underworld. Sincerely speaking, presently after having had a glance of you what craving for the host of beautiful damsels of heaven remains in me?

Having heard the statement of the enemy of celestial beings, god Nārāyaṇa the sole sustainer of the world, instantaneously noticed the demon had been intensely tormented by the arrows of the cupid. Thus finding the moment quite appropriate for the execution of His stratagem, the sole Lord of the world and the master of the Māyā addressed him in soothing voice juicy with divine ambrosia.

What a great surprise, finding you an abode of all virtues, possessing the essence of gallantry and having overcome the valour of even Śiva today, at the very first sight of you my mind has become suddenly full of immense love for you. Indeed, the ways of the Cupid (Kāma) do not come under the purview of customary norms all the three worlds over.

Having found a worthy and favourite darling like you totally devoid of blemishes and a treasure of the inexhaustible opulence of youth, I am quite sure, that my body stricken with scorching agony caused by the volley of arrows of the Cupid (targeted at me) will drive immense pleasure. What more happiness than this should I expect from you?

 तुङ्गोर्मिभङ्गिविहितोपलनादबाधा

O the most charming demon! I would earnestly wish to occupy your comfortable lap just now, if the stream gushing forth from the mountain uproarious with striking boulders and surging undulations had not stood as an unsurmountable obstruction. How to come close to you as I feel quite aghast, due to lack of proper succour?

Impatiently eager to drink the nectar of her lower lip the demonking, while listening to that choicest woman, did at once cast a wrathful glance and dried up the river springing from the uphill cavern of the mountain, with frightening grunt of "Hoom" which resembled the ferocity of the submarine fire.

अथाब्रवीद्वाक्यमुदारतेजा
 दैत्याधिपस्तां दयिते नदीयम् ।
 संशोषिता हुङ्कृतिवह्निना मे

O my darling, " said the most dreadful demon to her entreatingly" Behold the river is totally dried up with my fiery grunt, so I pray you to come close to me, putting aside all speculations of fear.

Then Lord-Viṣṇu with divine celebrity and guise of a lovely damsel under the cloak of Māyā replied to him smilingly, "The awe of the river has altogether vanished from my mind but another (threat) of the dreadful serpent clinging to your head, has arisen in me."

O my dear lady with lovely eyebrows! where is the snake seated over my head? (Murmuring these words) no sooner did he put his hand (unwittingly) on his head than Lord Śiva's fierce flame of the boon (produced its effect and) reduced that son of Diti¹ to a heap of ashes.

Instantaneously a roaring noise of victory reverberated the sky, shower of flowers fell from the heaven on that spot and the Lord Nārāyaṇa too returned back to Supreme-Siva and lay prostrate at his feet in utmost reverence.

successfully accomplished the mission entrusted to Him, the Lord- Īsāna adored Him with rich complimentary tributes and smilingly spoke thus.

साधु साधु महाबाहो यत्कृतं कर्म दुष्करम् । ४४ ।।

भस्मीकृतस्त्वया देव दानवोऽयं महाबलः ।

हृष्टोऽस्मि भवतोऽनेन कर्मणा गरुडध्वज । ४५ ।।

Bravo, bravo O mighty armed (Nārāyaṇa)! Indeed you have accomplished an arduous task in reducing the demon of an extra-ordinary valour to a heap of ashes. O Garuḍadhvaja!¹ this act of yours has made me extremely hilarious.

तदस्तु त्रिजगत्ख्यातं लिङ्गं हर्षाङ्कितं महत् ।

हर्षेश्वरेति विख्यातं वाराणस्या इवाधिकम् । ४६ ।।

For this reason (O Garuḍadhvaja!) by virtue of my divine authority, this magnificent Liṅgaṃ form of mine be ever possessing an indelible mark of that divine joy—let it be hence forth renowned as the Harṣeśvara-Liṅgaṃ all the three worlds over and let it be at par in sanctity with that of Vārāṇasī.

यो वै पपूयति मल्लिङ्गं भवत्सान्निध्यकारणम् ।

लभते विपुलान् भोगान् प्राप्नोति परमं पदम् । ४७ ।।

(Further) one, who lives up to the ideal of seeing this Liṅgaṃ of mine which forms the very basis of your 'Sānnidhya'² (close proximity), he is entitled to take adequate delight in worldly enjoyments and reach the highest domain as well.

1. The 'Garuḍadhvaja' is one of the innumerable names of God Nārāyaṇa. According to ancient Indian belief He is bearing the emblem of the Garuḍa—the Paurāṇic king of feathered creation on His banner, and as such is called Garuḍadhvajah.
2. According to Vaiṣṇava belief "Sānnidhya"—one of the four kinds of Mukti means attainment of the state of close attendance on God-Nārāyaṇa in the Vaikunṭha.

अश्वमेधसहस्रेण वाजपेयशतायुतैः।

The propitious reward attainable in lieu of performing thousands of the Aśvamedhas and hundreds of myriads of the Vājapeyas,¹ giving liberal alms to needy and practising austerities, the same be achievable by having a look of the sacred Harṣeśvara-Liṅgaṃ.

A devotee, who in your presence (inside the cave) invokes the divine Liṅgaṃ² by muttering over (performing Japa) the sacred Mantras, namely, the Soma-Nātha, the Aghora, the Vyomavyāpin and the Niṣkala decorates it with 'Gaṇḍha' (saffron paste) and fragrant leaves (Bilva-Patram), certainly attains the Sārūpya³ of the God Aghora⁴ and frees himself from the bondage of transmigration.

1. The Aśvamedha, the Vājapeya and the like are the sacrificial rites of the Vedic era. The performance of these irksome yajñas is not possible in the present age of the Kaliyuga.
2. In the sanctum-sanctorum of the Harṣeśvara cave the sacred Harṣeśvara-Liṅgaṃ is actually seated on an elevated daislike stone formation in front of another Liṅgaṃ formation ascribed to God Nārāyaṇa.
3. The word Sārūpya connotes a kind of Mukti. The secret of this type of Mukti lies in achieving the semblance of the God Aghora.
4. The Aghora is one of the forms of ultimate-Being who is never dreadful.

Any devotee, who (with a firm resolve) undertakes meditating upon the Liṅgaṃ called as Harṣeśvara, either with muttering over (Japa) of the sacred Ṣaḍaṅga-Mantram¹ of the universal pervasion and ambrosial efficacy, or the sacred Aghora-Mantram² together with its Praṇava (Vaktra), becomes quite sure to attain the Sārūpya of the eternal Conscious-Being-Ātma-Svarūpa and gets himself freed from the course of repeated transmigration.

This is the most sacred and efficacious Aghora-Mantram.

O Viṣṇu! that enlightened person, while still on earth, be assuredly blessed to assume Rudra-hood within, who may be constantly given to meditate upon the Harṣeśvara-Liṅgaṃ intensely pondering over the features of the divinity defined as under:

1. Having as many as ten arms;
2. Infused with Super-normal resplendence;
3. Bearing yellowish-white complexion—caused by anointing the heap of ashes;
4. Mounted on divine bull (Nandī);

1. "ओं नमः शिवाय"— is the sacred Ṣaḍaṅga-Mantram

2. "ओम् अघोरभ्योऽथ घोरभ्यो घोरघोरतरेभ्यश्च सर्वतः शर्व सर्वेभ्यो नमस्ते रुद्ररूपेभ्यः ।"

5. adorned with three eyes;¹
6. appearing in his Īśāna form bedecked with trident,² arrow, sword, thunderbolt and Abhaya³-Mudrā in rightside hands and, noose, bow, skull, lute and boon of the efficacy of manifesting all the three worlds, in leftside hands;
7. simultaneously appearing in His Mahādeva⁴ form with blue throat and the ornamentation of divine digit of moon;
8. at the same time presenting the look of His Maheśāna form as well uniquely ornamented with serpent and Gonāsā⁵-strand necklaces and holding the sacred Gaṅgā;

1. The fire, the moon and the sun symbolizing the subject, the object and the Confirmative-Proof thereof respectively constitute the three eyes of the Parama-Śiva.
 2. The trident symbolizes his three divine powers viz. 1. the Will-power, Içchā-Śakti, 2. the Cognitive-power, jñāna-Śakti and 3. the Action-power, Kṛyā-Śakti. All these powers are but three facets of one essential Freedom-power, the Svāntarya-Śakti of the Parama-Śiva.
 3. The word 'Abhaya' indicates a specified posture of the divine hand granting protection to all and sundry. This posture is technically called as the Abhaya-Mudrā.
 4. The Īśāna, Mahādeva, Maheśāna and the like are various aspects of the Parama-Śiva-hood, related to his various divine acts.
 5. The Saṁskṛt word "Gonāsā" pronounced as the "Guṇas" in common Kashmiri parlance, refers to a particular type of female-snake which is highly venomous and of swift offensive temperament. The Pargana "LĀR" in the extreme north of Kāmaraz area of Kashmir valley is extremely Gonāsā-infested place. Gonāsās are found in abundance in Khwanamuh area also. Eventhough this word has other connotations also but those are not to be taken into consideration in the present context.

9. shining like crores of moons put together, and
10. emitting divine lustre equal of crores of suns.

पञ्चस्थलीकृतस्नानो यो वै पश्यति शङ्करम् ।

1. Here the word 'Pañcasthali' refers to a cluster of five other sacred Tīrthas en-route to the Harṣeśvara cave. The ensuing description found herein reveals that in the days of yore the pilgrimage to Harṣeśvara was considered perfect and in conformity with the scriptural injunction only in case the sacred obligation of having dips in the holy waters of these five places and performing the worship of Śiva at each place was not neglected. Afterwards, presumably due to inevitable change gradually taking place in the socio-religious and historical scenario of the region, such tiresome religious practices had to be abandoned.
2. We learn about the five types of heinous sins in the Manusmṛti as under :—

ब्रह्महत्या सुरापानं स्तेयं गुर्वङ्गनागमः ।

महान्ति पातकान्याहुस्तत्संसर्गश्च पञ्चमः ॥

The Brahmanicide, drinking, theft, sexual relations with the wife of preceptor and the approbation to each, are said to be the five heinous sins.

Giving alms, undertaking pilgrimages to sacred 'Tirthas', practising austerities or performing sacrificial rites are of no avail to that person who takes upon himself to have a look (Darśana) of God-Śaṅkara only after having performed the ablutions in the waters of these five sacred places.

Seers

(O Vyāsa!) Verily you have made a casual reference to the Pañcasthalī by mentioning its name alone. We beseech you to tell us clearly right now asto which have been said to be these five sacred places.

Rising with the stroke of dawn on full-moon-day (Pūrṇamāsī) of the lunar month Jyaiṣṭha¹ (May-June a

1. The word 'Jyaiṣṭhī' in the 'Śloka' means the full-moon-day-(Pūrṇamāsī) of the lunar month Jyaiṣṭha corresponding to May-June of the Gregorian calendar. Contrary to the current practice of observing the full-moon-day of the lunar month 'Śrāvaṇa', (incidentally, the day is observed as the Rakṣābandhana also throughout the country), as the date for annual pilgrimage to the Harṣeśvara, actually it had been the Jyaiṣṭhī (Jyaiṣṭha Pūrṇamāsī) the fixed date for the purpose in the days of hoary past. What were the circumstances that led to the change in the date and when it is not known with certainty.

pilgrim should pay a visit to the majestic spring renowned as 'Takṣaka-Nāgarāja. After having a dip in the spring and performing worship with Tilakaṃ and other prescribed ingredients quite in conformity with the sacred precept, he should invoke the sacred Māheśvara-mantraṃ together with (related) presiding deity Soma-Nātha.

सर्वपापविनिर्मुक्तो मण्डलं याति भास्करम् ॥११०॥

लक्ष्मीरूपधरां तत्र देवीं सम्पूजयेद्बुधः।

The one, who with a devotional fervour takes a bath in the (magnificent) spring the Takṣaka-Nāgarāja, frees himself from all the sins and (ultimately) accedes to the sphere of the Sun-god.¹ An enlightened person is advised to offer reverence to the Goddess Śakti bearing the form of the Goddess Lakṣmī there.

ततो यायाच्च पूर्वेण मार्गेणैव सुसंयुतः ॥१११॥

जनकस्याश्रमं रम्यं गङ्गातुङ्गोर्मिलाञ्छितम्।

(Description of the second Tirtha)

Next the pilgrim, exercising the utmost self-restraint, should again follow the eastward course and arrive at the Janakāśrama² (Hermitage of Janaka) another breath-taking place marked with high rising ripples of the Gaṅgā.

1. 'To find access to the sphere of the Sun-god'-precisely connotes the liberation from the cycle of transmigration. In this regard, however, the 9th chapter of Śrīmad-Bhagvad-Gītā may be consulted.
2. On the authority of a marginal note found in one of the manuscripts the Jankāśrama has been the ancient name of the hamlet, presently known as the village 'Zowur'. It is situated about 3 Kms up in the eastward direction of village Zyawan. No trace of any ancient hermitage is available at present there except for a mosque and a shallow spring of limpid water from which a streamlet, referred to as the Gaṅgā in the text, springs out.

यत्र जालन्धरं पीठं कथितं पूर्वसूरिभिः ॥112॥

देवी वसति यत्रैव गणेशादिसमन्विता ।

This is the spot which the elite of the past had proclaimed as eminent as the Jālandhara-Pīṭha¹ and, where alone the Mother Pārvatī dwells perpetually together with Śrī-Gaṇeśa and other divinities.

तत्र गङ्गाम्भसि स्नात्वा जपेन्मंत्रं च शाम्भवम् ॥113॥

देवीं सम्पूजयेत्सम्यग्गन्धाद्यैर्भक्तिसंयुतः ।

After having taken a bath in the sacred waters of the Gaṅga there the pilgrim should perform the 'Japam' of the Śāmbhava-Mantram² and perform the worship of Mother-Devi, in a befitting manner by offering Her Tilakam etc. with due devotion.

जनकस्याश्रमे रम्ये गङ्गाम्भस्यतिनिर्मले ॥114॥

स्नात्वा सम्पूजयेद्देवीं शिवं चैवान्यदेवताः ।

प्राप्नोति विष्णुलोकश्च विष्णुना सह मोदते ॥115॥

ज्योतीरूपविमानस्थो माननीयो भविष्यति ।

This may be pointed out here that the practice of designating all such sacred streams as Gaṅgā has been common practice of almost all ancient Māhātmya-writers of Kashmir in yore, perhaps with the purpose of enhancing the sanctity of such sacred streams and making them at par with the famous river Gaṅgā.

1. The Jālandhara-Pīṭha of which the mention is made here was one of the four prominent Śakti-Pīṭhas of ancient India. According to available information this Pīṭha was established in Kangra town. Abhinavagupta the illustrious philosopher-saint of Kashmir (11th cent. A.D.) has made a repeated mention of this Śakti-Pīṭha with great respect in his writings.
2. "Om Namah Śivāya"-is the most efficacious Śāmbhava-Mantram.

Consequent upon performing ablutions in the limpid waters of Gaṅgā and paying due homage to the Mother-Devī, Lord-Śiva and other celestial gods there in that attractive Janakāśrama, the pilgrim, reaches the divine region of the god Viṣṇu and rejoices his perpetual company.¹ Besides his being crowned with the highest divine honour of being aboard the heavenly conveyance, appearing in the form of celestial luminosity, too is anticipated.

ततोऽपि पूर्वमार्गेण यायात् सोमस्य कुण्डकम् ॥११६॥

यत्र सोमोऽमृतं साक्षात् स्रवते दर्शचन्द्रयोः।

(Description of the third Tīrtha)

Thenceforward too, treading the eastward course, the pilgrim, should reach to Soma-Kuṇḍa² (another spring) where actually the nectar (instead of ordinary water) oozes through Soma the serpent deity both on the new-moon days (Amāvasyās) and the full-moon days (Pūrṇamāsīs).

1. On the authority of a marginal note of one of the manuscripts the Mother-Devī and Lord-Śiva mentioned in the verse represent the Amṛteśvarī and Amṛteśvara forms of both respectively.
2. The Soma-Kuṇḍa is yet another sacred spring traditionally consecrated to another legendary serpent deity Soma-Nāga by name. This is a beautiful spring situated under the cool and soothing shade of an age-old cluster of Ānār trees in the centre of village Upper-Khonamuh. The village, as has been already pointed out, was the original native place of the great Saṁskṛt poet Bilhaṇa. During his times the village was known as Khaunamuṣa of which he has made a clear mention in the following Śloka of his Vikramāṅka-Deva-Çaritaṁ.

यस्यास्ति खौनमुष इत्युपकण्ठसीम्नि-

(V.C. 18, 71)

सङ्गमे तत्परं स्थानं सोमकं नाम विश्रुतम् ॥११७॥

तत्र स्नात्वा यथाभक्तिः सोमं सम्पूजयेन्नतः ।

That eminent spot renowned as the Soma-Dhāma (the sacred abode of Soma) is situated on the confluence¹ (of two streams). A pilgrim, after having a dip in that, should pay due homage to Soma, with his head bowed in reverence.

आमश्राद्धेन सन्तर्प्य पितृपुत्रविधानतः ॥११८॥

उद्धरेन्मानवस्तेन स्वकुलान्येकविंशतिः ।

A wise man, having regard for prescribed absequal obligations² due from sons to their deceased forefathers, should seek deliverance of his past twenty one generations by performing the Āma-Śrāddha³ there and thereby generating an everlasting contentment in them.

According to a marginal note recorded in one of the manuscripts this spring hād been locally known as the Sooma-Nāga right from ancient days and continues to be called by the same nomenclature even at present. The village Khaunamuṣa, presently known as Khonamuh is situated at a distance of about 3 Kms up in the east of village Zowur.

1. According to an old tradition, still alive among the residents of the village, the water of the stream flowing from the Harṣeśvara peak, prior to being dried up by the demon Tāraka, joined here with the water of streamlet flowing out from this Soma-Kuṇḍa and formed a confluence—the sacred Saṅgama.
2. The 'Āma-Śrāddha' means a Śrāddha performed with uncooked rice and barley flour at a Tīrtha. The rite is otherwise called as the Tīrtha-Śrāddha also.
3. This may be recalled here that the age-old custom of performing the routine obsequial rites of deceased forefathers on the bank of this spring is still in vogue among the Hindus residing in this part of the village.

सोमधाम शिवं यान्ति तदीयाः पितरः परम् ।।119।।

Their deceased forefathers are sure to repair to the auspicious abode of Soma (the presiding deity of the spring) for thousands of celestial years ever-enjoying the heavenly food of ambrosia to their full satisfaction.

Thenceforward too, again following the eastward course and reaching in the proximity of Bhuvaneśvara,¹ one should take a dip in the Pāda-Gaṅgā.² Then performing the Japa

1. The 'Bhuvaneśvara' locally pronounced as 'Bhavaneśvari' is a hillspot of enchanting tranquility and soothing solitude, surrounded by lofty mountains on three sides, with one side open. It is traditionally believed to be sacred to a prominent Gaṇa of Śiva designated as Bhuvaneśvara. The spot is located on the foothills of the Harṣeśvara mountain at a distance of about three Kms to the north-east direction of the village Khonamuh. The actual ascend to the Harṣeśvara mountain starts from this point.
2. The Pāda-Gaṅgā, also known as the Hari-Gaṅgā, is an underground puddle of clean water there at Bhuvaneśvara. On one side it has a small opening from which one can of the sacred Māheśvara-Mantram¹ he should pay humble reverence to Īśvara (Bhuvaneśvara) by creating festive atmosphere all around there with the presentations of dance and music in His honour.

स याति पापनिर्मुक्तः पुरं सादाशिवं शुभम् ॥123॥

महाशिवेन देवेन मोदते स पुनः पुमान्।

The person, who in accordance with the prescribed form, takes a dip in the Hari-Gaṅgā on the day of Jyaiṣṭhī² frees himself completely from sins, repairs to auspicious region of the Lord Sadāśiva and rejoices the company of All-Resplendent Mahā-Śiva.

The pious man who, contemplating upon the resplendent Śiva right in accordance with sacred precepts of the Śaiva-Tantras and Śāmbhava-Mantras, performs ablutions in sin-removing water of the Gaṅgā (the Hari-Gaṅgā), attains the everlasting Sānnidhya of the God-Sadāśiva in His magnificent region—the Sadāśiva-Loka. Besides, on account of being abidingly devoted to Īśvara, acquires the prosperity and the progeny of sons etc. here in this world as well.

draw as much water as required for various purposes. An inscription in Śāradā characters is recorded on a flat surface of a big stone just above the opening. A photoprint of it is preserved in the Research and Publication Department of J and K state.

- 1 "Om Namaḥ Śivāya" is the sacred Māheśvara-Mantram.
2. As already pointed out ante the word Jyaiṣṭhī means the full-moon-day of the lunar month Jyaṣṭha (May-June) accompanied by the constellation 'Jyaiṣṭhā'.

ततः पूर्वेण मार्गेण योजनार्धेन विस्तृतम् ।।125 ।।

आरुह्य शैलराजं तु जपेन्मन्त्रं हि शाम्भवम् ।

Then again, treading the eastward course and after having scaled the lofty mountain ridge, extended over half a yojana,¹ one should engage himself in the Japa of the sacred Śāmbhava-Mantram (viz. Om Namaḥ Śivāya).

शैलस्योर्ध्वप्रदेशं वै प्राप्य पश्चाद्विलोकयेत् ।।126 ।।

गिरिपादतले दग्धमसुरं शैलतां गतम् ।

After having put the foot on the top of the mountain one should cast a backward glance and view the spot down on the foothill where demon (Tāraka) was set ablaze and (in due course of time) got converted into the solid rock.

यत्रासौ तारको दग्धो हरिणा लोकधारिणा ।।127 ।।

तत्स्थानं भस्मसङ्काशं जनैरद्यापि दृश्यते ।

The spot, where God-Nārāyaṇa, the sustainer of the world, consigned that (demon) Tāraka to flames, appears like huge mass of ashes to all passers-by even at present.

1. The word yojana connotes an ancient land-measure, roughly equal to 12 Kilometres.

Note: Here in between the end of Śloka No. : 127 and beginning of Śloka 128 one more extra line is recorded in one of the manuscripts. The line is quite relevant to the present context and runs thus:

‘दग्धारिरिति तत्स्थानं लोकैरद्यापि कथ्यते ।’

(The common masses call that spot by the name ‘Dagdhāriḥ’ even at present.)

This compound word ‘Dagdhāriḥ’, being a combination of two words viz Dagdha and Ariḥ, indicates the nomenclature assigned to the spot in the past, simply on account of the fact that the hostile demon was burnt here. The marginal note on this very extra line recorded in the MS gives the local Kashmiri version of this

तत् स्थानं शैलतो दृष्ट्वा ब्रह्महत्यां व्यपोहति ।।128 ।।

तच्चिताभस्मसङ्काशं दृष्ट्वा सान्तपनं व्रजेत् ।

Beholding of that spot from atop the mountain brings about redemption from the sin of killing a Brahmin. Hence one should undertake an atonement after seeing that heap of ashes which resembles the remains of a funeral-pyre.

ततो गिरिपदाधःस्थां नंदी दैत्येन शोषिताम् ।।129 ।।

विलोकयेन्नरो धीमान् दृष्ट्वा याति हि सद्गतिम् ।

Next to it a wise person should cast a glance on the course of the stream which was once dried up by the demon, along the foot of the mountain. Viewing of that unfailingly leads the prudent man to the state of everlasting bliss.

ततश्शैलोर्ध्वभागे वै पाञ्चालं भैरवोत्तमम् ।।130 ।।

सम्पूज्य गन्धपुष्पाद्यैर्यायादीशानगोचरः ।

अधः पादगतां गङ्गां द्वितीयां हरदेवताम् ।।131 ।।

तां जयत्रितयेनैव निर्गतां पश्चिमांशके ।

Then having paid due homage with offerings of Tilakam, flowers and the like, to the eminent 'Bhairava' known as the Pāñcāla (Bhairava)¹ atop the mountain, one should Dagdhariḥ' as 'Dadur'. This has been found correct on an on-the-spot verification. The inhabitants of village Khonamuh call this mountain ridge as 'Dadur-i-lot' in their local parlance. The Kashmiri word 'Lot' means a ridge in the context of mountain. Hence 'Dadur-i-lot' mean a ridge of Dagdhāriḥ (the ridge where the demon Tāraka was burnt in the hoary past).

1. The sacred place locally known as the 'Pañtsalu-Bhairav' is actually a narrow gorge surrounded by lofty mountain peaks on three sides with one side open. A murmuring stream of cool and clear water flows through it. It may be recalled here that this stream constitutes the second Pāda-Gaṅgā which a pilgrim comes across during the proceed ahead in the north-eastern direction. Scaling down a short mountain slope he should reach the course of a stream known as the second 'Pāda-Gaṅgā', having the Lord-Hara as its presiding deity and originating from the western portion of tripartite lock of Śiva's hair.

तत्र स्नात्वा पितॄणां यस्तर्पणं कुरुते बुधः ॥132॥

नरकात्पितृवृन्दं तु समुद्धरति निश्चितम् ।

याति चैवेश्वरं स्थानं भूयो जन्म न विद्यते ॥133॥

The wise person who, having taken a bath in the stream, offers libatory waters in the name of his deceased forefathers, unfailingly gets them relieved of infernal agony and himself repairs to the divine place of Īśvara to the exclusion of further births.

एषा पञ्चस्थली नाम पञ्च पापापनोदिनी ।

स्वर्गसोपानपङ्क्तिर्या तामतीत्य ब्रजेत्ततः ॥134॥

This is what we know as the 'Pañcāsthali' which possesses the efficacy of providing deliverance from five unpardonable sins and acts as a staircase leading to the heaven.

Then, leaving this spot behind, one should again proceed further.

ततः पानीयमादाय स्वर्गङ्गाया मनोरमम् ।

Then an enlightened person, carrying with him the sweet, pleasing and limpid water of that heavenly Gaṅgā, should again ascend back to the top of the mountain.

course of pilgrimage to the Harṣeśvara-Tīrtha. The entire surrounding area of mountain slopes is covered with long suspending fibrous roots believed to be the sacred tress of Supreme-Śiva stretched all over. The water of the Pāda-Gaṅgā gushes forth underneath these vast patches of thin roots with a sweet murmuring sound. This narrow gorge is locally known as the 'Murbal'.

किञ्चित्सङ्कल्प्य देवार्थं सर्वसम्भारतत्परः ।

Arriving back at the summit, the pilgrim, should first of all perform the customary half circumambulation (Pradakṣiṇā) and then alone proceed to the exact spot, where the cave is situated, with full fervour of devotion. Taking along with all the items of worship and keeping apart a portion of the same as a voluntary offering for the main deity he should enter the cave wherein the Supreme-Īśvara is stationed in a conspicuous (Lingam) form.

There to begin with, giving vent to humility repeatedly, kneeling on the ground, falling prostrate one should, first of all, approach to Śrī-Gaṇeśa who functioning as the leader of the Gaṇas, keeps a sharp vigil at the entrance.

Having performed his worship with the Japa of his own specific Mantram¹ and offerings like Tilakam and other tokens of devotion quite in accordance with scriptural precept, the cash offerings should be placed in front of Him in true spirit of devotion.

Next a fervent homage should be paid to God-Brahmā, God-Viṣṇu and Goddess-Pārvatī who are seated in front (of the Lingam) there.

1. "Om Gaṁ Gaṇapataye namaḥ" is the specific Mantram of Śrī-Gaṇeśa.

Thereafter, having accomplished all the esoteric formalities as laid in the Tantras¹ and performing the Japa of one of the Mantras namely, the Aghora the Soma,² Vyoma or the Rudra-Mantram the worship of the Liṅgam form of the Supreme-Śaṁbhū should be completed in all respects.

With a fervour of great devotion the Liṅgam should be

1. This needs to be pointed out here that the observance of various Tāntric practices, as also the Japa of the esoteric Mantras, as hinted here, holds good only in the case of such worshippers as are initiated in one or the other form of the Śaiva-yoga by an accomplished Guruḥ. For a lay person who is neither initiated nor observes a particular discipline, the abiding devotion coupled with humble reverence for the All-compassionate Parama-Śiva alone proves to be an effective means for attaining the desired goal. Regarding the sacred Aghora-mantram the footnote No. 2 on Śloka 91 supra may be referred to.
2. According to Svacchanda-Tantram (1, 8.3) 'हुं= Hum' is the sacred Soma- Mantram. Eventhough all other esoteric mantras are well defined in the holy scriptures like the Netra-Tantram, the Svacchanda-Tantram, the Tantrāloka and the like, but mere utterance of any Mantram without the backing of spiritual awareness is bound to prove to be a futile exercise.

strewn with distinct varieties of flowers. It should be honoured with the presentation of a dancing performance as a mark of seeing the Īśvara—the compendium of Supreme-Joy. Apart from covering with fresh apparel it should be gratified with offerings of the 'Naivedya' and other eatables.

O great seers! sumptuous cash offerings should be presented in order to seek the pleasure of the glorious Īśvara and this is the sacred ordinance which is to be followed while performing the worship of the Resplendent-Śiva.

हर्षेश्वराङ्घ्रितलपूजनकृत्पुमान्यो

The person who, offering reverential homage to the divine feet of the Harṣeśvara, performs the worship of God-Viṣṇu here in the early morning, on the lines of sacred ordinance, attains the most admirable semblance of the glorious Rudra instantaneously. In addition, O seers of repute! his body becomes a receptacle of divine effulgence.

The solemnization of the glamorous gala there atop the magnificent mountain should mark the occasion and, at the fourth Prahara¹ of the day the person on the pilgrimage, taking leave of the great-Lord (Harṣeśvara) in a very submissive manner, should climb down the hill through the same route, considering himself as having accomplished the life's mission.

1. The Sanskrit word 'Prahara' denotes an ancient measure of time roughly equal to present three hours duration. Eight 'Paharas' make one complete day and night.

सम्प्राप्ते भुवनेशस्य धाम्नि तं प्रणिपत्य च ।

तत्पादमूलेऽन्यस्मिन्वा कुर्याच्छेषाहवृत्तिकाम् ॥148॥

Arriving back at the sacred abode of the Bhuvaneśa and having paid Him due reverence once again, one should carry out the remaining portion of the day's proceedings either in front of the deity or somewhere else in the surrounding vicinity there.

एतत्तीर्थस्य माहात्म्यं श्रूयते मुनिपुङ्गवाः ।

O respectable seers! thus we hear about the great virtues of the Harṣeśvara-Tīrtha—the exalted place which one aspires to attain at the end of mortal life.

No less a divinity than Nandī, the chief of the Gaṇas, himself imparts initiation in the sacred Praṇava (OM) to him who breathes his last in the proximity of the Bhuvaneśa.

The divine ordinance stipulates that an aspirant who lives up to the muttering over (Japa) the exalted name of the "Harṣeśvara equally during childhood, adolescence or old-age, is bound to be transformed into Rudrahood while still alive.

The divine ordinance also provides that in sacred region of Kashimr, which is exquisitely bedecked with a large variety of Tīrthas, this one (the Harṣeśvara) alone is the Superior, highly propitious and par-excellence.

Essentially this (Māhātmyam) has been acquired and conveyed to me by the great sage Nārada. I have also narrated it to you with mounting spirit of devotion. It is now for you to ponder over it.

Throughout the world the total quantum of propitious virtue earned by setting foot on constant pilgrimage to sacred Tirthas and the affluence of religious merit acquired by the regular recitation of the Vedic hymns and other scriptures, both combined together cannot afford to be balanced exactly and be at par with that earned by abidingly serving the lotus feet of the Glorious-Harṣeśvara.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

PROF. N. K. GURTOO

Birth : Srinagar, Kashmir

Credited with an outstanding academic record of two post-graduate degrees in Sanskrit & Hindi in addition to two degrees of Shastri & Prabhakar of the undivided Punjab University, Lahore, Prof. N.K. Gurtoo occupies a place of distinction in the front row of Kashmiri speaking Sanskrit scholars. His chequered service record of over three decades in various educational Institutions & Research Department of the Jammu & Kashmir State has won him many a laurel. Though well-versed in various schools of Indian philosophy especially Sāṃkhya & Vedānta, his command on & penetrating insight in Kashmir Śaivism has given him a status of honour in the literary & philosophical fields. He actively participated in the Sunday discourses held at Śaiva Mathikā, Srinagar under the tutelage of his revered preceptor Śaivāchārya Śrī Ishwar Swaroop (Swami Lakshman Joo) during sixties, seventies & eighties of the current century.

Prof Gurtoo has edited and translated into Hindi with exhaustive notes four well-known texts of Kashmir Śaivism— (1) Parātriṃśikā, and (2) Spandakārikā (MLBD, Delhi) and his new works published recently are— (3) Sāmbapañcāsikā of Sāmba (Penman, Delhi) and (4) Amaranath's Māhātmya. He is also the sub-editor of "Kāshmir Shaiva-Darśana Vrihat-Koṣah" edited by his teacher Dr. B.N. Pandit.
